Travelling with a naturalist

A regenerative trip

Mario has worked for many years as a nature guide in destinations such as the Maldives, Mexico, Kenya, Mozambique, Seychelles, and Southeast Asia. He has led coral restoration programs, photo-identification projects for manta rays, whale sharks, and sea turtles, and contributed to elephant seal research in Mexico.

Today, Mario is the Conservation Project Manager at the World Sustainability Foundation (WSF), where he oversees initiatives dedicated to protecting biodiversity worldwide.

During your stay, Mario will offer engaging and interactive sessions such as:

- Travelling with a Purpose
- The Animals of the Savannah: The Big Five

Don't worry — these are not formal lessons, but fun, immersive experiences designed to help you better understand and appreciate the incredible wildlife you'll encounter.

Together with an experienced local guide, he will lead you through South Africa's wilderness for a once-in-a-lifetime discovery.

“By joining this journey, you actively support these initiatives and become part of a worldwide movement for a more sustainable planet.” says Mario
